The Canon Rebel XTI has been the most affordable, all-in-one camera on the market for several years. It is a choice that many people looking to try their hand at digital photography make when deciding on their first purchase. Since the release of the Rebel XTI in 2011, the market has changed dramatically with many more camera options available, and the need for a good all-in-one camera has never been greater. The Canon has since been superseded by the Rebel T6. The Canon Rebel XTI is not just your run of the mill compact camera that most people think it is. It isn't just another point and shoot from the 80's, it packs quite a few features, just not all of them that are apparent. As its name suggests, it is a Rebel in the sense that it is made by Canon, but is primarily a point and shoot camera rather than a camera for serious photographers. In addition to its well-rounded features, the Canon has the advantage of being able to save the RAW files in its SRAW (Super-RAW) mode, a feature that most DSLRs do not offer and most compact cameras don't offer. In this article, we take a look at the pros and cons of the Canon Rebel XTI, to see if it is the best camera for amateur photography. What Is the Canon Rebel XTI? The Canon Rebel XTI is a compact point and shoot camera made for amateur photographers. It is a lot more than that, but for this guide, let's look at it in its key features. I want to note here that Canon updates their equipment fairly frequently. The Rebel XTI for 2017 is not the same camera we looked at last year, and this guide has been updated accordingly. Key features of the Canon Rebel XTI 16 MP Nikon-quality CMOS sensor 14.1MP Live View display ISO 100-3200 (expandable to 50-12,800) SRAW Super-RAW mode (raw: 25.3MB, SRAW: 35.2 MB) 1.3x optical zoom lens with 3.5-5.6 optical zoom, 4.5x digital zoom MPX 3.0 focusing system New Touch Screen LCD display Metering system with face detection, exposure lock, advanced object 388ed7b0c7

Q: Android Broadcast Receive - A better way? My Android app needs to constantly check for "xyz" to be there. I can't afford to have my app consuming too much battery so I've got a method that listens for the xyz in the background: class MyBackgroundService extends Service { private BroadcastReceiver myReceiver = new myReceiver(); @Override public void onCreate() { super.onCreate(); IntentFilter filter = new IntentFilter(); filter.addAction("com.something.SomeClass.xyz"); registerReceiver(myReceiver, filter); } @Override public int onStartCommand(Intent intent, int flags, int startId) { //... } private class myReceiver extends BroadcastReceiver { @Override public void onReceive(Context context, Intent intent) { //do something } } } This is not a very good way to do it. It polls the internet over and over again (until it gets a positive result). The problem is that if it takes my app 5-10 sec to get a result then the user has to wait 5-10 sec before the app does something else. My question is: Is there any other way to do this without polling? A: It depends on what you want to do. If your goal is to keep the app running with the lowest battery usage, then I would suggest you to be more selective about the apps you open and close, especially when there is no user interaction involved. If this becomes too complicated, consider using a service which is kept running in the background as long as the device is on. Here is an example of a service running in the background using a Broadcast receiver which fires every minute: Mormons allow abortion as long as there is
